Choice Poetry.

A Man's a Man for a' That.

"A man's a man," says Robert Burns,
"For a' that and a' that;"
But though the song be clear and strong.
It lacks a note for a' that.
The lout who'd shirk his daily work,
Yet claim his wages and a' that,
Or beg, when he might earn his bread,
Is no a man for a' that.

If all who dine on homely fare
Were true and brave, and a' that,
And none whose garb was "hodden gray,"
Was fool and knave and a' that,
The vice and crime that shame our time
Would fade and fall and a' that,
And ploughmen be as good as kings,
And churls as earls for a' that.

You see yon braway, blustering sot,
Who swaggers, swears, and a' that,
And thinks, because his strong right arm
Might fell an ox and a' that,
That he's as noble, man for man,
As duke or lord, and a' that;
He's but a brute, beyond dispute,
And not a man for a' that.

A man may own a large estate,
Have palace, park, and a' that,
And not for birth, but honest worth,
Be thrice a man for a' that;
And Donald herding on the muir,
Who beats his wife, and a' that,
Be nothing but a rascal boor,
Nor half a man for a' that.

It comes to this, dear Robert Burns—
The truth is old, and a' that,
"The rank is but the guinea stamp,
The man's the gold, for a' that."
And though you'd put the minted mark
On copper, brass, and a' that—
The lie is gross, the cheat is plain,
And will not pass for a' that.

For a' that, and a' that,
'Tis soul and heart and a' that,
That makes the king a gentleman,
And not his crown and a' that.
And man with man, if rich or poor,
The best is he, for a' that,
Who stands erect in self-respect,
And acts the man for a' that

—Charles Mackay.

Miscellaneous.

THE RENEGADE'S DOOM.

A Story of Colorado.

A storm had raged all day; the bellowing blast carrying with it dirt and fine particles of sand, until the cloud was not only blinding, but till it was next to impossible for a human being to venture from under cover without having the very flesh lacerated or peeled from his bones. Tents lay scattered and rent in every direction, and even some of the "dobie" quarters had been leveled with their mother earth. Indeed, Fort Sedgwick presented much such an appearance as might have been expected had a band of Sioux Indians made a successful assault upon the place.

As the darkness came on the wind ceased to some extent, and then a steady storm set in, almost as terrible as was the sand-tempest of the day. It was densely dark, and this darkness was favorable to the movements of a savage band, who had lurked in a shallow ravine behind the bluffs, back about two miles from the Platte river.

The bugles at the fort had just sounded the tattoo and taps, when one of the band referred to arose from his prostrate position; and as he did so, gave vent to a coarse and mocking laugh.

Immediately after, a small light shot up. He had ignited a match for the purpose of lighting his pipe; and the brief flame, as he protected it from the wind with his fur cap, revealed his features. He was hideous in the extreme; and, although painted like a savage, it was easy for an experienced eye to detect the fact that he was not one. Then his voice and words were another proof; for turning around he spoke thus:

"Men, you will understand that our work must be quickly performed. At the first alarm those whom I have designated will dash into the quarter-master's, the sutler's and the commissary's. I have business at the commander's quarters; and this I shall perform alone. I shall be successful; and if you are not equally so, the fault will be your own—not mine. In all cases of this kind you must resolve that you will succeed or die, and then you will never know the meaning of failure. Come, and be cautious!"

Some twenty or thirty dark forms were seen to arise as if out of the ground and then they silently took their way down the bluffs toward the fort. Soon, however, the band separated, and every one of the number proceeded onward singly. Those who had received their instructions from the master-spirit simply contented themselves with gaining certain positions, and avoiding every sentinel. Not so with the leader.

When this person had arrived within a hundred yards of the hospital he paused and stood silently surveying the camp. Here and there were dim lights, but barracks and tents generally were wrapped in gloom. After a time the man muttered:

"Everything favors me to night, and I feel like a tiger. Oh, shall I succeed? If I do not, death will be the only thing which will prevent me. Do I love that girl? I scarcely know. I have strange feelings when in her presence. Something of the past comes up before me; but the recollection is like a dim dream. I am puzzled. Many is the time I have felt an inclination to spring upon her, even as the tiger would upon the young fawn, and rend her into pieces; and then I have felt again as though I must hold her to my breast, and weep. Curses upon it—what is this? Hang me if I don't think that a tear drop has already started from my eyes and dampened my cheek. Pshaw! Mad Leon the Renegade weep! Preposterous. It is only a melted ice-drop—melted by its contact with my warm cheek. But never shall my heart be melted."

Slowly did the renegade now advance, and as he approached the hospital he crouched lower and lower, until he actually crawled upon his belly like a serpent. Now he reached the building, and then he clung closely to its walls, still retaining his prostrate position.

It was but a moment after that a footfall was heard, and a guard passed the villain, who was not discovered. The soldier was closely wrapped in his great coat, while he carried his carbine in such a manner as to protect it from the damp. He did not dream even that death was hovering so near him. A moment after, he turned, and then passed exactly at the place where the renegade was lying. But quick as the lightning's flash he was hurled to the earth and the dark monster was upon his breast. A sharp cry arose; and then it became a death wail, merging into a moan and silence, for a huge knife was plunged into the quivering breast of the guard, and his life gushed forth with his crimson gore.

The murderer had clutched the throat of his victim in order to prevent an outcry from the dying man, and had only partially succeeded. He now raised his head and listened attentively, but no sound gave indication that the voice of the soldier had attracted attention. Raising the corpse in his arms, the renegade bore him some distance to the rear and deposited him in the dead weeds. Doing so, he exclaimed:

"A good general always leaves an opening for retreat in case of defeat, and I will do so by disposing of every guard in this direction. There is but one more to deal with, I think, and he is behind the quarters of the general commanding."

Mod Leon crept forward as before, and soon the soldier referred to shared the same fate as the first; but his cry was louder, and was not entirely unheeded, for a window, where a light had been burning, was thrown up and a voice asked:

"What is the matter down there?"

The dying man struggled hard to speak; but this the renegade prevented, while he answered himself:

"Nothing that I am aware of."

"But I heard a cry."

"So did I; it was one of the prowling coyotes."

No further question was asked, and the villain saw that the light which he had before observed had disappeared. He knew that the strong wind had extinguished it, as the window was raised and he muttered:

"May the devil favor me, and leave that opening before he gets another light, for I can then enter." But the devil did not so favor him. The sash came down with a crash, and the jingle of the glass told that some of the panes had been broken by the fall. This was of some importance and the villain knew it.

The guard once quiet, Leon cautiously mounted a shed and crept to the window where he had heard the voice. Now he could hear voices, for there were two persons in conversation. Applying his ear to one of the broken lights, he listened. He could hear every word distinctly, and the blood ran like lightning through his veins as the sentences were understood by him.

The voice of a female exclaimed through her sobs:

"O Harry Graham, is it possible that you tell me this? I shall die. Oh, I cannot live, for you no longer love me."

"I only love you too deeply, Marianna," was the reply.

"Then why do you tell me that I can never be your wife?"

"I cannot explain—I dare not."

"You must, if you would not see me fall dead at your feet, or live to become a maniac."

"Marianna, I feel that you have a right to demand an explanation, and this much I will tell you. Something which occurred years ago renders it necessary that, as a just avenger, I should kill your father. Can I do this and then wed his child?"

"Why, then, did you ever win my love?"

"I was only informed of the facts with regard to you this day, and I hasten at once to tell you as much as I dare."

"Harry, you must tell me all. I have never known my father; and if his crimes have been so great that he deserves death, I cannot blame the hand that strikes. For the love of heaven, tell me all.

"I will. Your father's name—so old Brant, who has had you in his keeping from infancy, tells me—was Paul Blackburn. He became the most deadly foes of my own parents, and for no other reason than that he was rejected by my mother. He swore the most deadly vengeance; but those who knew him did not believe there was any danger. I can well remember the night of that revenge, however. The glare of the flames which consumed my home is before me still; and the yells of the red demons led by Paul Blackburn are yet ringing in my ears. The ghastly and bloody forms of my parents are before me; and even the exultant words of their murderer are not forgotten."

"Oh, horrible! And my father was this monster?"

"He was. And this is not all."

"Let me know the worst."

"After my father's marriage, your own also took a wife, but his constant brutal treatment of her proclaimed his hatred. She interfered to save his victims, and with a single blow he struck her lifeless to the earth."

"He murdered his own wife—my mother?"

"He did."

"But how were you saved—how was I saved?"

"Here is a strange part of my story. I was a boy of seven years, and you an infant of six months. I remember seeing you fall from your mother's arms as she was stricken down. I remember seizing you in my own. and crawling into a place of concealment by the river's side. You were taken from me some time after by o'd Brant, and although I had forgotten him and yourself, I could not forget those events. Only to-day, as I before informed you, the old man gave me these particulars."

"Is that cruel father—that blood-stained man—yet alive?"

"Yes, and I have just learned that, too. I must seek him out for I shall never rest until I have met him face to face, and met him as the avenger of my slaughtered parents and desolated home."

The candle had been relighted, but it only cast a feeble ray around the apartment. Still it shone full upon the faces of the speakers, one of whom was a young officer, and the other a lovely girl of some eighteen years of age. The villain outside the window had gradually become more and more excited, and finally extended his hand through the opening; he pushed back the spring and raised the sash. So cautiously had this been done that the lovers did not observe the intruder until he leaped to their sides, his eye blazing with an unnatural light, and his already bloody knife firmly clutched to strike.

Upon beholding him the young officer leaped to his feet and asked:

"Who are you?"

"I am known as Mad Leon, the Renegade," was the firm response.

"And what do you want here?"

"I came for a single purpose, but I find that I have a double one."

"Then explain, and quickly too, or I will call the guard."

"I will explain. Not, however, because I fear your guard. I came for the single purpose of carrying away this girl to my mountain home. But I find that I must kill you."

"The game of death is one that two can play at, you shall find."

And Graham leaped toward the table upon which were lying his two revolvers. But a single shot was fired by the villain and the officer fell. As he did so the renegade seized the girl and cried:

"Go to those whom I sent to their graves years ago, and tell them that Paul Blackburn sent you there, for I am he."

He had sprung through the window, with Marianna in his arms.

Here, however, he met his mortal foe, old Brant. The fainting maiden was torn from his grasp, and a single blow a huge knife sent the polluted soul of the renegade before his Maker. As the blood gushed forth, the monster uttered a few bitter curses, and then fell from the roof by the side of the murdered guard.

This was not the only work performed by Brant. He had discovered the savages, and a single volley, which blazed out on the night air, sent a portion of their number to the "happy hunting-ground," and others yelping like wolves from the fort.

Young Graham was only wounded, and he recovered to make the orphan his wife.

A Racy Incident.

Soon after the opening of the East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad, there chanced to be traveling over the line, in a car where there were but a few passengers, a gentleman who was seated opposite the stove, wrapped up in his shawl and meditations. Night came on. Presently in bounded a brakeman, loudly slamming the door behind him—one of those country geniuses who, with a laudable ambition, had a day or two agone abandoned the girls, the fiddle and the plowtail, to climb "in the world," and became a brakeman. He had been the king-bee at all the neighborhood frolics, at the house raisings, at the corn shuckings, and at the cross-roads's doggery fighting ground, and now he felt sure that he was king-bee on railroads. Strutting up to the stove, he slammed down his lantern, kicked the mud from his huge boots on the foot board of the seat, spit tobacco juice copiously and noisily on the hissing stove, crossed his muscular thighs, took a survey of the aforesaid boots with harness-leather straps, and then bethought himself of the "customer" sitting opposite, on whom he proceeded to bestow a lengthened and saucy look, as though he doubted the "customer's" right to be in the coach at all.

At length he sought knowledge.

"Whar ar you gwine, mister?"

"To Dalton, sir," responded the gentleman quietly.

"Preacher, ain't you?"

"No, sir, I am not; but why do you ask?"

"Oh! nothing, only I thought I saw 'Hark from the Tombs' sticking out all over you, like the measils. You know me, I reckon?"

"I am sorry to say that I do not."

"Well, I'll jist be darned; why, whar the devil were you raised?"

"At Maryville, East Tennessee."

"Oh! that excuses you, for if ever I hearn tell ov that settlement afore, I wish I may be durned, and I knows every place, I dus."

"You seem to be well acquainted with the place you are now occupying," remarked the stranger, almost choking with efforts to suppress his laughter.

"What place do you mean, mister? This ere red bainch, covered with dried skins of cows' toungs, or my office?"

"I alluded to your office, and by the way, what is your position on this road?"

"Brakeman, by the jumping gemimy. I thought everybody knowed that; brakeman over the Yeast Tennessey and Georgia Railroad."

"Unfortunately, I did not know it."

"Well, you'd soon found the fact out if you'd cut up any shines roun' yere, huggin' wimmin, or cussin', or trying to steal anybody's carpet bag, or talking to the conductor, or sich. Why, I'd a chucked you bottom foremos' thru that winder, like dartin' clapboards thru the crack ov a barn. I mean to run this train on high moral principles, I dus. An' you didn't know I was the brakeman on this yere railroad?"

"Indeed, sir, I did not."

"Well, old Slideeasy, all I has got to say is that for a man of your looks you know less than any man I ever saw. How do you manage to make a living?"

"I receive a salary; I am President of this road; Wallace is my name; but I have not the pleasure of knowing yours; will you be kind enough to inform me?"

All symptoms of "king bee" disappeared at this thunderbolt announcement, and in the stead were seen timid humanity, crushed pride of place, a strong "git-up and-git" expression, and a most confounded hang-dog, "done-up" and "dog-goned" appearance generally. The brakeman slid.

REPORTED MURDER OF A WOMAN BY HER INSANE SON—A HORRIBLE STORY.—A young man by the name of Rufus J. Rimer was committed to our County Jail on Monday for killing his mother, Sarah Rimer, in this county, on Saturday, 5th instant. Rufus J. Rimer, the murderer, is about twenty-two years of age, and has always been considered by his neighbors as being partially deranged. At any rate, his actions at times were quite singular. He is also subject to epileptic fits. On Saturday morning he was at preaching and was noticed to be unusually irritable. After preaching he went to a neighbor's house, still manifesting much excitement, and his neighbors seeing something unusual about him, prevailed upon him to go home. He went off, but did not stay long, when he returned, and was again urged to go home. He went off to another neighbor's borrowed an ax, with which he cut off one of his fingers, and returned home. It seems that he and his mother, aged about fifty-two years, were living alone in the southern portion of Rowan. He says his mother, while wrapping his finger, hurt him, which induced him to kill her. He first gathered a hearth-stone which he threw at her as she escaped out of the door. The stone struck the door, when he again seized it and pursued her into the yard and beat her brains out with it. After he had completed the bloody work, he built up a fire in the house, took up his mother, laid her on it, locked the doors and retired to bed. Sunday morning he went to a neighbor's house and told them he had burnt her. His neighbors not being able to get any satisfaction out of him, proposed to go home with him and see. On arriving at the house they found the old woman, or what remained of her, lying in the fireplace almost entirely burned up. R. J. Rimer was at once arrested and committed as above stated.—Salisbury (N. C.) Examiner, March 9.

THAT IRREPRESSIBLE FLY.—It has attained the dignity of a public nuisance. It worries us at every street corner. All the ragged urchins in the city are whistling, singing, and shouting "Shoo, Fly!" Its awful caricature stares us in the face everywhere like a nightmare in the daytime. In card size it is vended at every picture stand, in life size it is posted on every available advertising space, and like other sensations of the day, it won't stay in its own sphere, which in all conscience is extensive enough. It hasn't any conscience, and ruthlessly invades all parts of the social fabric. It has entered the furnishing stores, and furnishes its detestable name to all manner of goods. We have the "Shoo fly hat," and "Shoo fly cravat," the "Shoo fly shirt," the "Shoo fly boots," blacking, cuffs, collars, sleeve-buttons, suspenders, and what next the Lord only knows. We venture humbly to suspect, however, that the next adaptation will be as a Sunday school song, a psalm tune, or church voluntary, with brilliant variations by the organist on the vox humana stop. And why not, when a distinguished divine quotes it from the pulpit? It is worse than the small-pox and bad as the cholera, and catches more readily than either. It is the "fraud" of the period, and a satire upon itself. "Shoo, fly, don't bodder me." Exactly so; why doesn't it "shoo," and stop bothering us? But with malice prepense an 1 aforethought, this awful "fly" only buzzes the louder, and the more we hear "don't bodder me," the more it does bother us.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE PROGRESS OF OPINION.—A Nantucket sea-captain tells the following anecdote about a shipmate who accompanied him on one of his early whaling voyages:

Stiles was a simple hearted, transparent young fellow; and when we sailed, had been "paying attention" for some time to a young lady, who, he had reason to think, did not fully reciprocate his ardent feelings. At all events, the parting on her side, was not so affectionate as he could wish, and he was impressed with the belief that she only kept him as a stand-by, in a default of a better offer. "I don't believe," Stiles would say, with a despondent shake of the head, "I don't believe Ann Jones 'll have me anyhow." When we had been out a few months, and had met with fair success, Stiles, tone was modified. The burden of his monologue changed to, "Well I don't know but what Ann Jones 'll have me after all." With a thousand barrels of oil under hatches, he became still more hopeful. "Chance is pretty good for Ann Jones," he would say: "Pretty good now." At fifteen hundred barrels he had assumed a self satisfied manner, and soliloquised—"I guess there's no danger but that Ann Jones 'll have me now." At two thousand barrels—"Ann Jones 'll be glad

More Robbery.

WE all remember with what a flourish of trumpets and shout of self-laudation the Republican party of this State in 1866, announced the abolishment of the tax on real estate, and how they claimed the united support of the citizens for so noble an alleviation of the public woes. The better informed Democrats of the State were loath to believe in the honesty of this act, and did not accept it as a proof of willingness on the part of the Republicans to minister to the public good, or as an evidence of the prosperity of the State finances under their management. In other words, it was believed that there was a very large nigger in the wood pile of the Commonwealth. And behold! these surmises have proved correct. Experience showed that the income, thus done away with, was necessary to meet the expenses of the extravagant administration, and therefore, rather than acknowledge their blunder, the Sinking Fund was made to supply the desired amount. In the recent examination, in Harrisburg, of the administration of the State Treasurership, it was given in testimony that the Sinking Fund had been robbed of a million and a half of dollars, and that the State Treasury was bankrupt. That is, the money which the Constitution provides shall be used to pay the State debt, had been diverted from its proper purpose and used to fill up the hole in the revenue, made by the stupid, blundering financial policy inaugurated by the Republicans as a catch-penny dodge to ensnare unthinking voters. Here's a fine commentary on Radical financiering to be sure; and now the people will have the satisfaction of knowing that, to bring the State back to the condition in which it was in the spring of 1866, they will have to pay a million and a half of dollars used for the benefit of the State Treasurer and his friends, instead of for the reduction of the indebtedness of the Commonwealth.

"These be thy Gods, O! Israel!"

A Spectacle.

Mr. Octoroon Revels "spoke a piece" the other day, in the U. S. Senate; and "Mr. Morton followed, congratulating Senator Revels upon the fact that he had so well vindicated the ability and intelligence of his race and the country. Mr. Morton said that in exchanging Jeff Davis for Mr. Revels the country had lost nothing in ability, and gained much in patriotism and loyalty." Wherein Senator Morton told a palpable, unmitigated and deliberate falsehood. As to ability, neither Revels nor Morton, nor both together equal Jefferson Davis; and as to patriotism, there is little or no difference, except as to manliness, and there Davis has the advantage, between him who endeavors to destroy the Constitution, sword in hand, and him who, in the Senatorial chair, by his vote, seeks and compasses the same end; both alike are traitors.

But how did the Octoroon "vindicate the ability and intelligence of his race and the country?" Morton knew, every body else knows, that whatever of "ability and intelligence" Revels has, is due to his white blood, and not to his African. It is demonstrable nearer home for that matter. And yet grave and foolish Senators inflict such twaddle upon the country. It is sickening and disgraceful; and even the negro, if he possessed one-tenth the "ability and intelligence" with which they accredit him, would be disgusted with the fawning sycophancy.

Mr. Collector Bailey.

Another pet of the administration has come to grief. J. F. Bailey, collector of Internal Revenue for the Thirty-second District of New York, who has rendered himself notorious by the vigor of his prosecutions of alleged Governmental defrauders, has defaulted and absconded, indebted to the Government to the extent of, it is supposed, $200,000. His bond which is signed by some of the wealthiest men in New York, will reduce the actual public loss $100,000. Mr. Bailey is reported to have said not long since, that "he did not desire money but rather the name of an honest public official" or words of that import. He is one of the class of hypocritical scoundrels who are constantly being exposed and who cloak their nefarious schemes under the garb of patriotic devotion to the interests of the Nation. Investigations show that Bailey's defalcations began when he was collector of the Fourth District in 1867, and that his subsequent transactions have been made to cover losses incurred then. Nothing is known of his whereabouts, but diligent search is being made and, he may be caught,—and perhaps sent south to carpet-bag it for the United States Senate. In the meanwhile Bailey greatly distresses his bailees.

Legislative Piety.

DE LARGE is a negro member of the South Carolina House. He brought an apple-pie into the Chamber, the other day, and generously divided it among the members occupying seats near him. The dainty lunch caught the eye of Elliot, another negro member, seated at a distance, and he rushed across the hall with the demand, "Gib me some ob dat pie!" As the pie, so De Large's liberality had diminished, and there being but a single slice remaining, he replied to Elliot's demand by ramming that hastily in his own mouth. Elliot was not to be so easily robbed of his expected treat. Like an eagle he pounced upon the member from Charleston, and, grasping him by the throat, endeavored to choke him into a more generous state of mind. Being the stouter and having the advantage in position, he standing and the other seated, Elliot succeeded in jamming De Large's head down upon his chair, when the latter ended the encounter by using his knife upon his antagonist's leg, sending him away to his seat, amid the laughter of the House.

Legislative Relaxation.

The Topic, is the name of a new Radical sheet lately started in Harrisburg, having the two-fold ambition of supporting John W. Geary for the Presidency and publishing such insufferable stuff as the following, taken from its columns. Our readers may now see how certain of the hard worked Senators and Members, spend their leisure hours in the evening and (perhaps) may think more highly of them for the same.

"A bill in commemoration of the Fifteenth Amendment was held last night at the Exchange by the children of "Afrie's burning shore." The feminines were dressed in good taste, danced gracefully and exhibited fine examples of gentility and propriety. Their male companions were no less remarkable for their good deportment; and, taken altogether, the affair was a decided success. Mixed up with those of darker complexion there was a goodly sprinkling of pale faces, some of them belonging to the members of the legislature on both sides of the House, showing an appreciation of the occasion. It was quite pleasant to see these gentlemen tripping it off merrily in the dance with some of Ethiop's darkest daughters. This ball was in all respects as interesting and well-conducted as if it had been gotten up and confined exclusively to the "white trash."

Serious Squabble.

Richmond, Va., is in a singular state of domestic warfare. There are two Mayors and two separate and distinct sets of subordinate officers, each claiming jurisdiction in that city; the one set elected by the citizens, the other appointed by the military authorities. On Sunday night last a collision occurred between the police of one Mayor and the negro adherents of the other, in which one white man was killed and an unknown number of negroes killed and wounded. We had understood that Virginia had been reconstructed and admitted to her old place in the Union, but, if this be so, what right have the military to appoint officials, whose choosing is supposed to be the prerogative of the citizens? At whose door should the deaths of these unfortunate men be placed?

If only such officers are to be elected by the people as are approved of at Washington or the Head Quarters of the Department, then is the admission of Virginia but a fraud and a sham, and she is in no wise entitled to the name of a "Sovereign State."

Something Like Truth.

The New York Sun, one of the bitterest and most extreme Radical newspapers in the country, thus speaks of the Chief Magistrate of the nation.

If this outspoken expression of an opinion, which we doubt not, is shared by many others, is to be taken as evidence, there is much dissatisfaction in the Republican Camp over their Military Commander and somewhat of a correct appreciation of his abilities as an Executive officer.

"We do not misinterpret the public judgment when we say that no man ever chosen to the Presidential office stood so low at the close of the first year of his term, in the estimation of the leading minds of his party as General Grant does. In short, General Grant has, at the close of his first year, proved so lamentable a failure, both as a statesman and a politician, that no well-informed and far-seeing Republican contemplates his renomination as a possibility; while a large body of the wiser and more cautious members of the party apprehend that his course must inevitably break it in pieces before the next Presidential election."

GENERAL GRANT'S sporting friend George Wilkes, Editor of Wilkes' Spirit was caned on Broadway, New York, one day last week, by Maj. W. W. Leland of the Metropolitan Hotel. The provocation was an abusive article in Wilkes' paper. We have not learned whether this will cause an increase in the army or whether New York will be put under military supervision. If it had occurred a little further south it would undoubtedly be done. Wilkes intimates that all kinds of fearful punishments will eventually fall on the head of Major Leland, but does not state in what manner or by whose agency. Congress may yet be called on to legislate Maj. Leland out of his boots.

New Paper.

HARRISBURG, March 16, 1870.

"THE Daily Topic, with Dr. John H. Gihon, late private secretary to Governor Geary, as Editor and Proprietor made its first appearance this evening. The editor, in his Salutatory, foreshadows a firm determination to adhere to the principles of the Republican Party, and to support Governor Geary for the next Presidency."

Well! well! "If the little boys mind their p's and q's, and the little girls their manners, they may some day," &c., &c. But seriously, what has Geary done to Gihon, that the latter should thus expose him to the laughter of the nation? If that subject is to be the Daily Topic, it will be a cheerful newspaper.

"THE Lewisburg board of school directors make no distinction in the pay of their teachers on account of sex. Qualification is the only standard. Will our board be equally just next year?"—Republican.

If you knew anything, Doctor, about your own neighborhood, you would not have published the above harmless squib. The School Directors of Bloom Township have made no distinction on account of race, color or sex. Do try and be accurate once. Even your subscribers complain of your blunders.

THE very latest Presidential ticket which we have seen is B. F. Butler for President, B. F. Whittemore for Vice President. With a carefully assorted cabinet of the same general stripe of men, we should undoubtedly have a strong team, one which would cause, we should imagine, a large emigration from the shores of the United States to Russia and other liberally governed countries, when life might not be altogether a burden.

ANOTHER incident in connection with Whittemore's expulsion has come to light. It is said that while the investigation was going on, Mr. Niblack, of Indiana, went over to Whittemore, and said:

"Whittemore, I'll tell you how you can retain your seat."

"How?" asked the dealer in cadetships.

"Get a Democrat to contest it," was the reply.

The Columbia County Invasion.

XXXII

THE CASE OF DYER L. CHAPIN.

This gentleman was, in 1864, a merchant and justice of the peace resident at New Columbus on the border of Luzerne county, and had previously represented that county in the Legislature. He was arrested and taken to Benton church, 31st August, 1864, and thence, with the other citizen prisoners, to Fort Mifflin on the Delaware, where he was detained until taken to Harrisburg for trial on the 19th of December following. On the 28th of December he was tried before the Military Commission and promptly and honorably acquitted. He was finally discharged from custody on Saturday the 31st of the same month and permitted to return home, having been precisely four months within the grasp of military power.

The following is the official announcement of the finding in his case, as approved by Maj. Gen. Cadwallader, in general orders No. 4, dated at head quarters, Department of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, January 14th, 1865.

"Before a Military Commission which convened at Harrisburg, Pa., pursuant to Special Orders * * and of which Brig. General Thomas A. Rowley, U. S. Vols. is President, were arraigned and tried:" * * *

"2nd.—Dyer L. Chapin, a citizen of Luzerne county, Pa., on the following charge and specification:

Charge:—Aiding and abetting resistance to the draft.

Specification:—In this; that the said Dyer L. Chapin did furnish, sell and deliver to one Francis M. Iekler, gun caps and two pounds of lead, more or less, to be used against United States soldiers coming up the valley of Fishingcreek, in Columbia county, Pa. knowing the same were to be used for the purpose of resisting the said soldiers of the United States:

This done on or about August 14th, 1864, at or about the village of New Columbus, Luzerne county, Pa.

To which charge and specification the accused, Dyer L. Chapin, a citizen of Luzerne county, Pa., plead not guilty.

Finding:—The Commission after mature deliberation on the evidence adduced, finds the accused, Dyer L. Chapin, a citizen of Luzerne county, Pa., as follows:

Of the Specification.....Not Guilty.
Of the Charge.....Not Guilty.

And the Commission does therefore acquit him."

The accusation on which Mr. Chapin was tried appears almost farcical upon its face; but slight and frivolous as it was, it was found to be unjust and false. Besides, it was either concocted some time after his arrest or made to take the place of more material matters of accusation which could not be sustained. It was first heard of, or produced in a formal manner, when Col. Albright came upon his expedition as an evidence hunter toward the end of September, but other matters of accusation, or a different form of the same accusation, would seem to have been bruited about before. We have heard that a bill or voucher of Mr. C's for "2 lbs. of lead," was read or reported as "2 bbls. of lead;" the clear inference being that he was engaged in procuring or furnishing supplies for the so-called "insurrection." Another wonderful statement made concerning him is ventilated in the correspondence which we subjoin and which will fitly conclude the present number. We submit it without remarks as it fully explains itself, but we will here say that in our next number we shall sketch the rise and progress of the ridiculous accusation upon which Mr. C. was finally tried and furnish the other leading particulars of his case now referred to.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW COLUMBUS, PA. }
March, 2d, 1870. }

Messrs. P. C. Wadsworth, and Jacob Fitzgerald.—Dear Sirs:—Will you do me the favor to reduce to writing a statement made in your presence by Gwynn Tyreman concerning a report that he had put in circulation about seeing my team hauling a Cannon through Town Hill, the latter part of the summer of 1864, and oblige

Yours very respectfully
D. L. CHAPIN.

TOWN HILL, PA. }
March 3d, 1870. }

HON. D. L. CHAPIN.—Dear Sir:—Your favor of the second instant is before us, and contents noted. In compliance with your request we annex the following statement.

About the time the military forces of the United States, were marched up Fishingcreek, in the latter part of the summer of 1864, it was reported that Gwynn Tyreman had occasion to be up late one bright moonlight night, and had seen your team pass through Town Hill between midnight, and day light with a cannon which your team was hauling to Benton or Fishingcreek in Columbia county for the conscripts, who it was reported were congregating there in a large force to resist the draft. Subsequently we were in A. J. Hess' store in Town Hill, and heard him ask Gwynn Tyreman about seeing your team hauling a cannon to the conscripts in Benton and Fishingcreek, in answer to which Gwynn Tyreman, replied that he had never seen your team hauling a cannon or anything of the kind and that he had started the report just to create an excitement.

Respectfully Yours.

JACOB FITZGERALD.

Obituary.

Mr. Gulian C. Verplanck, a gentleman eminent in political and literary circles, died in New York, on Friday March 18, 1870, aged 83 years. He had been a Sachem of Tammany, President of the Century Club, an Editor of Shakspeare, a Vestryman of Trinity Church, a member of the Legislature, a member of Congress, Author of two or three law books, a Professor in the General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church, and writer of some Theological Treatises, &c. &c.

The Episcopalians of New York have lost heavily, as has the whole country, in the death of Fennimore Cooper, Washington Irving, Fitz Greene, Halleck and now of Gulian C. Verplanck.

THE London Times speaks of the representation of minorities as a subject of discussion, with a view to its adoption in all the free legislatures of the world and declares—note it, all ye ambitious politicians of the future!—"proportional representation is the creed of all the men in the front rank of the party of "movement."

—A man in Leavenworth went out to drown himself, but met another who called him a liar. That saved his life, for the thrashing he got, in attempting to correct the false impression, put all thought of death out of his mind.

—An Indiana lawyer, finding his principal witness too drunk to testify when he was wanted, addressed the court in a four hours' speech, in which he touched upon everything, including the Fifteenth Amendment, and finally his man came to time.

—The National Baptist, in the course of an editorial article, says—"If candidates for baptism present themselves, whose physical cleanliness is questionable, we entreat the administrator to instruct them to wash themselves at home, and to use soap. The baptistry is not a bath-tub, and when candidates enter it they do not go in to bathe."

—A soldier's widow in Leavenworth, Kansas, lately employed a claim agent to collect one hundred dollars bounty due her husband. She then had to hire another lawyer to collect the money of the claim agent, and a third to collect what was left of the second. She finally received twenty-seven dollars.

—"Yes," said Mr. Quill, in a discourse upon the millenium, "we may all live to see the lion lie down with the lamb; but it is likely they will be inside of each other, and the lamb won't be on the outer side neither.

—"Ticket sir?" said a railroad conductor, passing through one of the trains the other day, to a passenger. "My face is my ticket," replied the other, a little vexed. "Indeed!" said conductor, rolling back his wristband and displaying a most powerful bunch of fives, "well, my orders are to punch all tickets passing over this road."

—A lazy man in the West has invented a novel apparatus, called the "Automatic Fire Lighter." It consists of a small clock on the plan of an alarm clock which at any desired hour lights a match and oiled wick on the stove hearth by means of a connecting wire. The kindlings in the stove are so arranged that they are readily ignited, and all that is needed is to decide at what time you want your fire started in the morning, set the clock properly and go to sleep. It will do the rest itself.

—Persons curious about the wages of royal folk abroad may find it consolatory to know that there is paid to Alexander II. $8,250,000, or $25,000 a day; Abdul Aziz, $6,000,000, or $18,000 a day; Napoleon III., $5,000,000, or $14,219 a day; Francis Joseph, $4,000,000, or $10,050 a day; Frederick William I., $3,000,000, or $8,210 a day; Victor Emmanuel, $2,400,000, or $6,840 a day, Victoria, $2,000,000, or $6,270 a day; Leopold, $600,000, or $1,643 a day. In addition to this salary, each sovereign is furnished with a dozen or more first-class houses to live in without any charge for rent.

—In the Iowa Senate, on the 8th inst., soon after the Senate was called to order, the Doorkeeper announced, "Message from the House," and Miss Mary E. Spencer, Engrossing Clerk of that body, appeared and modestly said, "Mr. President." That officer replied, "Miss Clerk," and Miss Spencer proceeded to read, in a clear and distinct voice, a message from the House in relation to certain bills which had passed that body. At the conclusion of the message the Senators approved of this first official act performed by a woman in the Iowa Senate, by a general clapping of hands.

Eldridge on "Loyalty."

Mr. Eldridge, of Wisconsin, is not particularly enamored of the Radical cant of loyalty. The other day in the House, he said:

"The word "loyalty" I have always despised. I despise what is called a "loyal" man; I hate him from the crown of my head to the sole of my feet. I once undertook to illustrate to the House by a story the meaning of this word "loyalty;" and as the House may have forgotten the incident I wish to repeat it for the benefit of my friend from Massachusetts. The question was asked why a friend of mine could not get the contracts out of which he could make money during the war, and one who was able to get contracts and make money, a loyal man, told him the reason why he could not was because he was disloyal, and the reason why he could was because he was "truly loyal." My friend says, "Now, what do you mean by loyalty?" "Mean?" he says; "why it is a feeling which pervades a man, that influences his whole conduct, that make him really what he is, or what he is not." "But," said my friend, "what does that mean?" He replied, "It is a feeling." "Well, then, how do you feel?" "I feel loyal." "But what is that feeling?" He then replied, "I feel as though I wanted to steal something or kill somebody." [Laughter.] And that is loyalty. You have made that word take the place of the true and noble old word—the foundation principle of the republic and of the nation—to take the place of "patriotism." I am patriotic, but I am not "loyal." It is a word which does not belong to this country; but only belongs to Massachusetts.—[Laughter.]"

Legislative.

SENATE.

HARRISBURG, March 18, 1870.—Mr. Purman introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That Wm. W. Irwin having appeared before the Senate Committee on the Treasury investigation, and refused to be sworn and give evidence to the said committee in such matters as the Senate deems necessary to the performance of the legislative duties of the Senate, the said William W. Irwin is hereby adjudged guilty of contempt, and therefore the Speaker of the Senate be and is hereby authorized and directed to issue his warrant to the Sergeant-at-Arms, authorizing and requiring him to produce at the bar of the Senate Wm. W. Irwin, there to be held and subject to such orders as the Senate may make in the premises.

The motion making the resolution the special order for Wednesday evening, was agreed to.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The Senate bill extending aid to the Jersey Shore, Buffalo and Pine Creek Railway, the Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston, up the Monongahela valley the Clearfield and Buffalo, and the Erie and Allegheny Railroads, was considered.

The bill authorizes the companies above named to exchange their own bonds for those of the Pennsylvania and Allegheny Valley Railroads, now in the State Treasury.

The bill passed—yeas, 59; nays, 34.

SENATE.

HARRISBURG, March 16.—The following bill was introduced by Mr. Findlay, obliging railroad companies to keep their ticket offices open for one hour in advance of the departure of each train.

The Senate bill to aid the construction of a railroad from the Susquehanna river to Port Allegheny and Buffalo, was considered.

HOUSE.

The House gambling bill of Mr. Beans was considered.

Mr. Elliott said that under its provisions a man who played a game of billiards for a glass of ale could be sent to prison.

Mr. Beans called the previous question, under the operation of which the bill passed by 65 yeas to 13 nays.

Congress.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Georgia bill being taken up H. R. Revels the colored Senator from Mississippi made a half hour's speech. He was listened to attentively by a crowded house Dan Sickles was confirmed as minister to Spain by a vote of 45 to 13.

HOUSE.

The deficiency bill was passed, after which the tariff bill was discussed until adjournment.

FRIDAY, March 18.—In the Senate, yesterday, among other bills introduced, was one to organize the new Territory of Oklahoma. But little progress was made with the Georgia bill.

In the House the greater part of the session was occupied with the proceedings in the case of Mr. Butler, of Tennessee, charged with improperly disposing of a cadetship to West Point. The first vote taken was upon the resolution of expulsion which was rejected, a two-thirds vote being necessary—102 to 68. After some debate a resolution of condemnation merely was unanimously adopted by a vote of yeas 157.

SATURDAY, March 19.—In the Senate yesterday, the Judiciary Committee reported a resolution declaring that Gen. Ames is not eligible to a seat in that body from Mississippi. The discussion on the Georgia bill was begun soon after the expiration of the morning hour and continued up to adjournment.

In the House but little was accomplished.

TUESDAY, March 22.—In the Senate, yesterday, the greater part of the session was occupied with the debate on the Georgia bill, the question being upon Mr. Drake's amendment, authorizing the President to dispatch troops to any section of a State represented to be in insurrection. A bill furnishing the Southern States their quota of arms from 1861 to 1865, or the equivalent in ordnance stores, was passed.

In the House, of the bills reported from Committees the most important appropriates $20,000 to aid the Sisters of Our Lady of Mercy in Charleston, S. C., to rebuild their Orphan Asylum destroyed during the war; it was promptly passed. In Committee of the Whole, the Tariff bill was debated at length.

THE New York Herald says, the Funding bill was worked up for the special benefit of the national banks; that the plan is to do away with the legal tenders and place the whole circulation in the hands of the national bankers, who will control Congress, the administration and the material interests of the country for their own benefit; and that the power thus possessed by the national banking monopoly will be used to prevent a return to specie payments.

Latest News.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 16.—Gen. James W. Ripley, of the United States Army, died at his residence in this city last night. He was born in Windham, Conn., Dec. 10, 1794, and received his first commission in the army June 1, 1814. He has been for some time in feeble health.

SCRANTON, Penn., March 17.—At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Avondale Relief Association, held on Monday last at Plymouth, the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That the Secretary is hereby directed to commence suits against all delinquent subscribers to the Avondale Fund; but in each case to give twenty days' notice before any steps be taken to enforce the collection of the same."

NEW YORK, March 17.—A terrible explosion of nitro-glycerine occurred to day at the Little Ferry farm, about a mile from Ridgefield, Bergen county, New Jersey, resulting in the loss of life. On one side of the river bank was situated Schaffer's nitro-glycerine manufactory, a long low building one story in height.

A number of men were employed about the works to-day. A lot of glycerine was to be shipped, and the men were engaged in carrying it from the building to a sloop at the river bank. The glycerine was put in bags. One man, while carrying a bag, lost his hold, and the bag fell exploded. This explosion caused a second bag to explode with a worse effect than the first.

The factory was blown to pieces, and four of the workmen were blown into little bits. The leg of one man was found three hundred feet distant. None of the bodies could be recognized. Seven men were very badly injured. The windows of the houses over a mile distant were smashed by the force of the explosion.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 18.—After the adjournment of the Senate a disgraceful encounter took place in the Chamber between Senator Nagle and Linderman. It appears that during the morning session Mr. Linderman made use of language which Mr. Nagle deemed personally insulting, and after the adjournment Mr. Nagle demanded an explanation which was not satisfactorily given, whereupon Mr. Nagle took his redress in his own hands, and blows were exchanged. Mr. Linderman was the sufferer. Mr. Josephs of the House and others interfered, and prevented further difficulty.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—Stacy Bancroft, an old and highly respected merchant of this city, formerly of the firm of Bancroft, Beaver & Co. died today, aged 76 years.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., March 19.—A singular phenomenon occurred at the commencement of the storm yesterday morning. A rumbling noise was heard and immediately afterwards a portion of the bottom of the harbor on the Carlton side sunk bodily; so where before at low tide was beach is now twenty feet of water. Some of the wharves were destroyed and lumber carried adrift.

FALL RIVER, March 20.—This afternoon while a large congregation was assembled in an incomplete French Catholic Church to witness the blessing of the corner-stone, the floor gave way, and about 250 people fell 12 feet into the cellar. Ten or twelve are known to have had their limbs broken.

SCRANTON, Penn., March 20.—On Thursday night a serious accident occurred at the Delaware and Hudson Canal Shaft, No. 1, known as Kern's Shaft, situated near Plymouth, by which ten men were seriously, though not fatally, injured. From some derangement in the machinery the carriage, on which was a car containing the ten men, started down the shaft without the counterbalancing weight. Before it reached the bottom the brakes were applied, but not quick enough to stop the carriage, although its fall was much lessened in velocity. The shaft was 360 feet deep.

BALTIMORE, March 21.—On Sunday morning, a little girl, while toasting bread at a stove in the upper part of the city, had the misfortune to set her clothes on fire. She ran into the yard and before her mother could come to her relief from the second story of the dwelling, she had literally roasted to death.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The Senate confirmed the nomination of Joseph P. Bradley, of New Jersey, as associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, by a vote of 46 to 9.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 22.—This morning at 7 o'clock, the boiler of the coal breaker of the Wolf Creek Diamond Coal Company, near Minersville, exploded. The building was demolished, and the boiler carried over a hundred yards. Three boys, were instantly killed, and nine wounded. The cause of the explosion is not known. The boiler was in good condition before the explosion. The coroner's investigation is progressing.

The Season and its Dangers.

The human body is chiefly composed of tissues and fibres as sensitive to every change in the condition of the atmosphere as the most delicate electrometer, or the quicksilver in a barometer tube,

The stomach, the skin, the nerves, the lungs and the excretory organs are especially liable to be affected by these variations, and the best defence against their disastrous tendency is to keep the digestive machinery, which feeds and nourishes the whole system, in good working order.

If the stomach is weak or disordered neither the blood nor the bile can be in a healthy state, and upon the fitness of these two important fluids for the offices assigned to them by nature and the regularity of their flow, health in a great measure depends.

When the air is heavily laden with chilling vapors, as it often is at this season of the year, the digestion should be an object of peculiar care. If it is weak and languid, the whole physical structure will be enervated. If it is vigorous, the entire organization will be strong to resist the untoward and depressing influence of a damp and vitiated atmosphere.

A pure and powerful tonic is therefore especially needed as a safeguard against the diseases most common in the Spring, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters being the most wholesome and potent medicine of the class at present known, a course of it is particularly advisable at this period of the year. The stomach will thereby be toned and strengthed, the liver and bowels regulated, the nervous system braced up, and nature put in a state of active defence against the miasma which superinduces intermittent and remittent fevers, rheumatisms, nervous debility, headache, hypochondria and other complaints which are apt to assail the untoned and unfortified organizations. The body is strengthened without exciting the brain, and consequently no unpleasant reaction follows its reviving and renovating operation.

ATTENTION.—The freshest and best stock of Dry Goods, Groceries &c. in Bloomsburg is to be found on the shelves of C. C. Marr, Main st, near Iron. He has all the latest styles. A large assortment of Glass Ware on hand, the celebrated "Sterling" six cord spool cotton, known as the best in the market. Prices greatly reduced.

THERE is scarcely any ache to which children are subject, so bad to bear and so difficult to cure as ear-ache. But there is a remedy, says an exchange, never known to fail. Take a bit of cotton batting, put upon it a pinch of black pepper, gather it up and tie it, dip it in sweet oil, and insert it in the ear. Put a flannel handkerchief over the head to keep it warm. It will give immediate relief.

INCREASED LENGTH OF DAYS.—The first day of February was nine hours and fifty-eight minutes long, and the last day of the month eleven hours and twelve minutes, being a gain during the month of one hour and twelve minutes. In March the gain will be one hour and twenty-three minutes; in April one hour and twenty minutes; in May fifty-six minutes, from June 1st to June 22d, when the maximum is reached, 16 minutes.

FRESHETS.—People in various parts of the country are watching the weather with much anxiety. In view of the immense quantity of snow which has fallen, a warm rain would prove most disastrous, as the vast amount of melting snow would swell the streams to torrents and cause much damage to property. There is great depth of snow near the head waters of Fishing Creek but if no rain storm sets in, we fancy it will pass off gradually and without raising the water to any extraordinary height.

VENDUES.—The number of public sales throughout the country is unusually great. It is a noticeable fact that goods, cattle, horses, &c., are sold very reasonably. Persons having sales this spring, must expect, on account of the scarcity of money, to sell cheap. So much the better for the buyers. Where the man advertises his property, there is always a greater number of persons at the sale than if he meanly tacks up a "notis of public sail," written by himself.

HUGE TURKEY.—We learn from a correspondent that Mr. William Miller, of Lower Windsor township, York county is the fortunate possessor of a turkey, that is decidedly the weightiest we have ever heard of in this part of the country. He informs us that it is about six months old and has attained the great weight of eighty pounds. If it continues to increase in size and weight as it has done friend Miller will be able to gather neighbors "far and near" about his table on the return of Thanksgiving day.—Wrightsville Star

ACCIDENT AND DEATH.—While two miners were engaged in drilling through the rock at New Mines on Saturday last their drill tapped an old mine from which a two inch stream of water burst upon them with great force. They hurried to make their escape and one succeeded, but his companion, William James, unfortunately fell down the slope, over one hundred feet, and was instantly killed. His body was recovered about an hour after the incident. He was an Englishman, 22 years old and leaves a widow with one child. —Pottsville Stadard.

FIRE IN MUNCY.—On Sunday morning last, between four and five o'clock, a fire occurred on Main Street, Muncy, which destroyed several buildings occupied respectively by Geo. Gower & Son, boot and shoe dealers, J. V. Reeder, Jeweler, Philip Peters and F. Ort. The fire originated in the bakery of F. Ort, whose loss is considerable, with no insurance. Mr. Peters' household goods were saved, though in a somewhat damaged condition from hasty removal and exposure. Gower & Son, were heavy losers by fire and thieves. J. V. Reeder's goods were saved.—Standard.

"THAT'S WHAT'S THE MATTER."—When a circus comes along and does not advertise in The Republican, because of its limited circulation, it fortwith abuses the whole concern. So with the "Peak Family Bell Ringers," the first and best in the United States. They saw fit to patronize this office, and hence our neighbor vents his petty spite through his local columns. After insisting that the Court House should be used for such purposes, he abuses the first troupe that appears in town. "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

SAD AFFAIR.—On Thursday of last week a little girl seven years of age, by the name of Tabb, residing in Frosty Valley was accidentally shot by her brother, twelve years of age. The boy had a pistol and supposing it not to be loaded pointed it playfully at the little girl and snapped it, when it exploded and the ball entered the forhead and taking an oblique course downward and backward lodged in the brain. The injury is presumed to be fatal owing to the inflammation, which will ensue. The brain is oozing from the wound, although the child still lives. The ball was not extracted.

NORTHERN families are settling in and around Elizabeth City quite rapidly. They are as follows:

Dr. P. John, from Bloomsburg, Pa., Aaron Fulmer, from Bloomsburg, Pa., Capt. Samuel Waters from Catawissa, Pa., G. A. Potter, from Bloomsburg Jesse G. Haycock, from Catawissa, Pa., Richard Francis, from Bloomsburg, Pa., In addition to these the following gentlemen have purchased with a view of soon locating here: P. H. Christman, Rev. P. W. Melick, H. C. Hartman and T. J. Morris, Esq., and E. B. Brower, all of Bloomsburg, Pa., and Joseph Eves, of Muncy, Pa. Quite a number of others are making arrangements to come.—North Carolinian.

BIG STEERS.—Jacob Snyder, of Butler county, challenges the United States to compete with two steers he has at present on hand. The steers will be six years old in May next. One is white and the other is red. The white steer is six feet high and girths ten feet and ten inches high and weighs 3,425 pounds. The red steer is six feet two inches around the body, and weighs 3,430 pounds. We think Mr. Snyder will bear off the palm in contest with any man's steers in the United States.

The editor of the Butler Herald states that since they were last weighed, they have increased fully one hundred pounds each.

HORRIBLE.—The streets of Bloomsburg, at this writing, are in a disgusting state of liquefaction. The melting of the snow, has converted the thoroughfares into perfect Sloughs of Despond, and it is impossible to cross from one side to the other without totally removing all semblance of the polish of respectability from our boots, as well as the smile of happiness from our faces. The so-called crossings are in as bad condition as any part of the street, and only merit the name from the fact that people walk on them—that is, when they can get through the mud which covers them.

IF Daniel Lindenmuth will send us the communication he writes about, and if it is on a proper subject, we will insert it gratuitously.

SINGULAR.—The ruins of the late fire in this town are still smoking with unabated vigor, although a month has elapsed since the conflagration. This is really remarkable in view of the quantity of snow which has fallen and melted of late.

"J. S." writes us that he "has not received the last three numbers of the COLUMBIAN. In this instance the fault is ours, and not the Post Master's. We have stopped "J. S.'s" paper because he has taken it over three years and never paid us a dollar, notwithstanding our repeated hints on the subject. Subscribers of that class should remember that we must pay cash for paper, material and labor, and unless we had the capital of a Cœsus, could not lay out of our money three years. We doubt whether "J. S." waits on his customers that long, and he should do to others as he would have them do to him.

SOMEBODY HURT.—Our editorial of last week on the murder of the half starved, plague-stricken Piegan Indian women and children, has touched our neighbor on the raw, and he rushes to the defense—almost the only journal in the land that has done so—by giving the statement of the murderers. But even that condemns them; for there is not a particle of testimony that the Piegans had anything to do with our border troubles. The theory of Sheridan and his apologists is, that if a man commits murder, his wife and children should be butchered; if a man steals, his family should be imprisoned! And this is the party of "high moral ideas."

PERSONAL TO HOGS.—We live in hopes that, when Bloom is finally under a town government, an ordinance may be passed banishing from our streets the unsavory quadruped whose name is mentioned above.

We can see no good reason why pigs who pay no road taxes and who are not amenable to collectors, should usurp our sidewalks and stalk proudly through our highways. Let them be banished to more distant and fattening pasturage or confined to the domains of their proprietors. Pig, considered as pork, is not objectionable, but as a living breathing, peripatetic creature it is a nuisance "Its offence is rank, it smells to Heaven."

A MURDER AT SHAMOKIN.—A murder was committed at Shamokin on Friday night last, of which we learn the following particulars; Two men were left on watch at Estwick Colliery, who occupied a small house erected for their convenience. During the evening some person or persons came to the door and demanded admission, which was refused and the door held fast. Finding that the men on the inside were determined not to open, those outside commenced firing through the door, which was of thin boards, with revolvers. One of the watchmen, named Buchanan, was shot and instantly killed, and his companion was shot through the ear. The perpetrators of the bloody deed are unknown and the whole affair is still enveloped in mystery.—Sunbury American.

THE STATE LICENSE LAW.—The following bill explanatory of the State License Law, has passed the Legislature. It may be interesting to manufacturers and mechanics selling other wares than of their own manufacture.

Be it enacted &c., That hereafter manufacturers and mechanics who shall sell goods, wares or merchandise, other than their own manufacture, not exceeding the sum or value of five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be classified or required to pay any annual tax or license fee; but if such sales shall exceed the sum or value of five hundred dollars per annum as aforesaid, they shall be classified in the same manner, and required to pay the same annual tax as is now required to be paid by dealers in foreign merchandise.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.—Isaiah J. Rudy, bricklayer, of Williamsport, working on the stack of the Trout Run Extract Works, which is now eighty-five feet high, fell on the 4th inst., from the stack to the roof of the building, forty five feet, on his hands and face, with only a few scratches and bruises. The ladder was within five feet of the top of the stack, and on trying to come down, caught hold of the padlock, (a piece of wood fastened in the brick work) which turned and he came down quick.

On the 29th ult., a hand was examining the stack, which was then seventy-five feet high, and while looking up, a five pound plumb fell down plumb on his breast-bone. He got up about a rod from the building, without any unpleasant result.—Williamsport Bulletin.

"IN publishing the Court proceedings last week, there was a slight error. In the matter of Davis vs. Brockanay, we were made to say, Davis vs. Brockway. Knowing that there was some difficulty in the matter of settlement of the Estate of Davis, dec'd., we were easily led into the error."—Republican.

When the attention of the editor of the Republican was called to his mistake he apologized and promised to retract. We are now satisfied that his original publication was intentional, or else there would not have been the gratuitous addition about trouble in settling the estate. There is no trouble whatever, nor is there any such case on our dockets as Davis vs. Brockanay, nor does it sound as near like our name as it does like "Bradley." In other words, in correcting one misstatement he has made two, and all intentional.

"THE Columbian, of last week, carries its criticism, which is intended to be funny, to the verge of the grave and wounds the hearts of bereaved parents by thoughtlessness. This may not be ignorance, but is it too much to ask that it be discontinued?"—Republican.

When Bradley penned that article he acted like a true Republican editor—he lied, and did it knowingly too. The criticism to which he alludes was not written in this office but was taken from the Miltonian, a paper of his own political proclivities, and the editor of the Republican is perfectly well aware of this and that nothing was further from our intention than causing pain to any one. Knowing all this he assumes the high moral tone, which illy suits him, and tries to acquire a little reputation as a censor of thoughtlessness. There's a final reward promised in the Bible to liars and hypocrites, and Bradley can count positively on getting his share. We would recommend to his attention a little work written some time since by one Mrs. Opie, "On Lying" which contains much that is applicable to his case.

THE INVASION.—Our articles upon the Columbia County Invasion have been interrupted for several weeks, out are now put again in a course of publication In addition to the cause of temporary delay heretofore mentioned we desire to say that we have waited to receive certain papers from D. L. Chapin Esq., which were necessary to our exhibit of his case. Our narrative had reached the proper point for entering upon his case and we did not desire to give it an imperfect treatment. We think the arrest and long imprisonment of this gentleman shows more of stupid malice than the arrest and imprisonment of any other one among the victims of the Invasion. Other arrests were equally causeless and unjust, but not one of them was so destitute of a plausible pretense and presented so farcical an aspect. Four months of imprisonment and then the farce of a trial for the sale of one small box of caps and two pounds of lead! Truly the grotesque and ridiculous here, give distinction and character to the pranks of despotic power and may well excite as much of laughter as of indignation.

MURDER IN PLYMOUTH.—Our neighboring borough of Plymouth has become emulous of distinction as a shire town, and on Friday night last put in an additional claim to consideration. At the time mentioned, it is alleged that an altercation took place between members of rather a rough party, at Jessup's hotel, which culminated in a fight between a man named John Gallagher and Richard Van Loon, son of ex-Sheriff Van Loon. Upon the men being separated, Gallagher, it is said, rushed up stairs and got a revolver, with the avowed purpose of shooting his antagonist. Upon returning to the scene of disturbance, he took deliberate aim at Van Loon, and fired the fatal shot. The ball entered the abdomen of the unfortunate young man, and death ensued in about two hours. The murderer was immediately secured, and after an examination before a magistrate committed to our county jail. Gallagher asserts that the deed was committed in self-defence. He says that he was set upon by a crowd and badly beaten before he made the assault which ended in the death of Van Loon. He afforded evidence that he had been subjected to pretty rough usage some where, as his face was cut and bruised in a shocking manner, but we are not able to say how far the facts will tend to corroborate his plea of justifiable homicide.—Luzerne Union.

(Concluded.)

Where were they? Alas! they did not themselves know. They only knew that they had been awakend suddenly by a thump and that when they jumped out of the canoe and started to go home, everything was different. There was no foot path, no clearing where the tree had been cut down, no sound of father's axe near by, nor of mother's song—and the stream was rushing on very angrily over its rocky bed.—The canoe, which had been broken loose and, borne by the current, floated away with them miles and miles from the stake, was wedged between two great stones when they jumped out of it; but now it was gone—the waters had taken it away. After a while in their wanderings, they could not even find the stream, though it seemed to be roaring in every direction around them.

Now they were in the depths of the forest, wandering about, tired, hungry, and frightened. Two nights they cried themselves to sleep in each other's arms under the trees; and as the wind moaned through the branches, Winnie had prayed God to save them from the wolves and the Indians and little Nat screamed, "Papa! Mamma!" sobbing as if his heart would break. All they had found to eat was a few red berries that grow close to the ground.—Every hour the poor children grew fainter, and, at last, Nat couldn't walk at all.

"I'm too tired and sick," he said, "and my feet's all tut. My toos and tockies is in the boat. O Winnie! Winnie!" he would cry, with a great sob, "why don't mamma'n papa come! Oh! if mamma'd only come and bring me some bread!"

"Don't cry, dear," Winnie would say, over and over again. "I'll find some more red berries soon; and God will show us the way home. I know he will. Only don't cry Nat, because it takes away all my courage."

"All your what?" asked Nat, looking wildly at her, as if he thought courage was something they could eat.

"All my courage, Nat." And then, after searching in vain for more red berries, she would throw herself upon her knees and moan:

"Dear Father in Heaven. I can't find anything more for Nat to eat. Oh! please show us the way home!"

What was that quick sound coming toward them? The underbrush was so thick Winnie could not see what caused it, but she held her breath in terror, thinking of wolves and Indians, for there were plenty of both, she knew, lurking about in these great forests.

The soud ceased for a moment. Seizing Nat in her arms, she made one more frantic efforts to find her way to the stream: then, seeing a strange look in the poor little face when she put him down to take a better hold, she screamed:

"Nat! Nat! Don't look so! Kiss Winnie!"

"Hello, there!" shouted a voice through the underbrush, and in another instant a great stout man came stamping and breaking his way through the bushes.

"Hello, there! What on irth's up now? —Ef old Joe hain't come upon queer game this time. Two sick youngsters, starving, too, by Josh! Here, you yo unguns, eat of this 'ere, and give an account uv yourselves."

With these words, he drew from somewhere among the heavy folds of his hunting dress a couple of biscuits.

"Hold up! Not so sharp!" he said, "you must have a little at a time for an hour yet. Here, sis, give me the baby; I'll feed him; and as for you, jest see that you, jest see don't mor'n nibble."

"Oh! give me a drink!" cried Winnie, swallowing the cracker in two bites, and for an instant forgetting Nat.

The man pulled a canteen or flat tin flask from his belt and gave her a swallow of water; then he hastened to moisten Nat's lips and feed him crumb after crumb of broken biscuit.

"Another hour," he muttered to himself, as he gently fed the boy and smoothed back the tangled yellow hair from the pale little face, "another hour and he had been past mendin."

Winnie looked up quickly.

"Is he going to die?" she asked.

"Not he," said the man, "he'll come through right end up yet. He's got a fever on him, but we'll soon knock that under. How'd you get here, my little?"

Winnie told her story, all the while feeling a glad certainty at her heart that their troubles were over. The stranger carried a gun and he had a big pistol and an ax and a knife in his belt. He looked very fierce, too, yet she knew he would not harm her. She had seen many a trapper before since she came to the West, and though this man looked very grand and wore a wonderful hunting dress all embroidered and fringed, and a hat and yellow leggings, she felt sure he was the very trapper who had been at her father's cabin a few weeks before and taken supper and warmed himself before the fire, while he told wonderful stories about Indians and furs, and about having many a time had "fifty miles of traps out on one stretch."

She remembered, too, that her father had told her the next day that trappers lived by catching with traps all sorts of wild animals and selling their furs to the traders, and that this particular trapper had been very successful, and had great influence among the Indians —one of the big men of Colorado, as he said.

These thoughts running through her mind now as she told how they had been lost for three days and two nights, and the sight of Nat failing peacefully asleep on the trapper's shoulder, made her feel so happy that she suddenly broke forth with "O, Mr. Trapper? I can run now. Let's go right home!"

The stars came out one by one that night and blinked at a strange figure stalking through the forest. He had a sleeping child on each arm, and yet carried his gun ready to fire at an instant's notice. Trudging on he muttered to himself:

"Well old Joe, you've bagged all sorts of game in this forest, and trapped most everything agoin', but you a'nt never had such a rare bit o' luck as this. No wonder I stood there on the edge of the timber land, listening to I don't know what. Reckon here's a couple o' skins now'll be putty popular at one market at any rate—fetch most any price I could name—but I'll let'em go cheap; all the pay I want for these is jest to hear the kisses of them poor frightened—Hello! there's a light! What ahoy! Neighbor, hello! hello!"

"Got 'em both," he shouted as three figures, two men and a woman, came in sight through the starlight. "All right, got 'em both."

The children are awake now. What sobs, what broken words of love and joy fall upon the midnight air! And through all, Winnie, wondering and thrilled with strange happiness, is saying to herself:

"I knew God would show us the way home!

FARMER'S COLUMN.

Make a Scrap Book.

Every intelligent, progressive farmer takes a paper. This is a fixed fact. It is to be hoped too, that he has half a dozen journals, of one sort or anot her coming every month. But, however that may be, when he reads them over he often says: "Now I wish I could remember that item; and put it in practice next season. I believe I will cut it out and save it somewhere." He does cut it out and puts it in his vest pocket, or between the leaves of a book, or in some out of the way place, where there is little chance of his ever seeing it again.

Now when he cut it out he took a step in the right direction. Why did he not go on a little further, and paste it in a scrap book? Then it would have been permanently saved and very convenient for reference. Preserving papers in flies would save all the articles, but few would ever take the trouble to look all through them for some point they wished to read over again. It would seem too much like looking for the proverbial "needle in the hay-mow." The scrap book gives you the very cream of your papers. There are usually only a few articles in each one which seem to have been written expressly for you, and you do not care to save those belonging to somebody else. You do not care to read the columns on bee-keeping, when you never owned a bee in your life; but probably your neighbor takes more interest in that than any other department. It is the beauty of every good paper that it has something in for every one.

The house-mother can never buy as good a receipt book as she can make by carefully saving the useful receipts and suggestions she meets in her weekly paper. The book should have a simple classification; the receipts for cooking should be placed by themselves, those for general housework may be placed in another part of the book—the same directions on gardening, care of children, etc.

Such a book is a great means of economizing in the course of a year. Just the right thing in the right place often saves dollars of money, and dollars' worth of time and trouble. Just such hints and directions we meet with from week to week in every good paper, and it is the putting it into practice that makes the difference between the thrifty, successful farmer and his opposite. Of course if they are forgotten they cannot be put into practice. The mind, unless it has been severely disciplined, is apt to hold knowledge as much as a sieve does water. It needs many helps to make the mind useful. The very act of cutting out the slip and pasting it in is a great help towards recalling it and if the details are forgotten, there is the article itself—you can turn to it readily. Thus you can be benefited by the experience of hundreds of people you have never seen, but who have kindly noted down their own success or failure in the various departments in which you are inierested.

How to Cultivate Norway Oats.

It will be impossible to give very definite directions as to culture, so much depends on the condition of the soil. The same advantage, in proportion, is gained on any soil that oats are ever grown on. Last season we contended that on rich or poor land we could assure double the yield that the other varieties would produce. The result proves that they will do much better than this, while in many instances good crops have been secured on land that other oats would not produce anything. They require no extra culture, but may be highly cultivated without danger. Our rule for seeding is one bushel to the acre, which is ample for ordinary ground. If the soil is poor, the quantity should be increased; if very rich it should be reduced. Some of the largest crops have been produced from a seeding of 16 to 20 pounds to the acre. It must have room to spread, and if seeded too thick it will choke itself. On the richest soil they grow stalks sufficiently strong to hold up the heavy weight of grain without lodging, if sowed thin enough to give them room to grow the immense number of shoots that spring from every kernel of seed. They mature about the same time as other oats, and should be harvested when about half cured, as the weight of the berry renders them more liable to shell than common oats, when too ripe.

HOW TO MAKE COFFEE.—First, solemnly determine in your own mind never to allow an ounce of ground coffee to enter the door of the kitchen. If no one about the premises understands the art of roasting coffee, then buy it ready roasted, and try and find a dealer who has not soaked all the essential juice from the coffee before putting it into the oven. If the roasted berry is about twice as large as when green, depend upon it you have been defrauded. Get an earthen pot—and put the ground coffee in a clean white flannel bag, and be sure to put enough in, and drop the bag into the pot. Pour on boiling water and let it steep; do not boil it. The coffee will steep in twenty minutes. Never break an egg into coffee, and never fill it up with water the second time. Pour on in the beginning the amount of water needed. An ordinary teacupful of ground coffee is sufficient for three persons. Use Java, Mocha, or Java and Rio mixed. Follow this receipt, and you will never complain of poor coffee. —Am. Builder.

AN individual of much practical experience says that green cider, deposited in and about mows of grain, will prove an effectual preventative against the depredations of mice and rats. These animals are frequently very destructive in their ravages, and if a remedy so simple and easy of attainment be efficacious, it deserves to be known and remembered by all. We have long known that the stalks of the common mullen will drive rats from their haunts.

PHŒNIX PECTORAL CURES COUGH!
PHŒNIX PECTORAL CURES COUGH!
PHŒNIX PECTORAL CURES COUGH!

25 CENTS. $1.00

The Phœnix Pectoral will cure the diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Colds, Cough, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Whooping Cough, and Pulmonary Consumption. This medicine is prepared by Dr. Levi Oberholtzer of Philadelphia, and formerly of Phœnixville, Pa., and although it has only been offered for five years, more than one million bottles have already been sold, and the demand for it is increasing every day. Many of the Retail Druggists buy it in lots of five gross, and not a few of the Country Storekeepers try one gross at a time. Nearly every one who has ever sold it testifies to its popularity, and nearly all who have used it, bear testimony to its wonderful power in curing Cough. We are confident that there is no known medicine of such great value to the community as the Phœnix Pectoral.

It has cured cases of the most painful and distressing cough, of years standing.

It has given instant relief in spells of coughing.

It has instantly stopped the paroxysm of Whooping Cough, and greatly shortened its duration.

It has cured Croup in a few minutes.

Consumption has been cured by it, where all other remedies failed to do good.

Hoarseness has been cured by it in a single night.

Many physicians recommend it, and others use it themselves and administer it in their practice while others oppose it because it takes away their business.

We recommend it to our readers and for further particulars, would refer you to the circular around the bottle where you will find numerous certificates given by persons who have used it.

It is so pleasant to the taste that children cry for it.

It is a stimulating expectorant, giving strength at the same time that it allays the cough.

The proprietor of this medicine has so much confidence in its curative powers from the testimony of thousands who have used it that the money will be refunded to any purchaser who is not satisfied with the effects.

It is so cheap that all can buy it.

Price 25 Cents, Large Bottles $1.00

It is prepared only by

LEVI OBERHOLTZER M. D.,

WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

No. 158 North Third Street, Philadelphia, N. LORILLARD'S "EUREKA" Smoking Tobacco | is an excellent article of granulated Virginia; wherever introduced it is universally admired.

It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Meerschaum Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S YACHT CLUB Smoking Tobacco | classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all;" it is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effect, as the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first quality Meerschaum Pipes. Try it and convince yourselves it is all it claims to be, "THE FINEST OF ALL."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY Chewing Tobacco. | This brand of Fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior anywhere. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS | have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years, and still acknowledged "the best" wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN

$1.500 CASH. FOR 1870. $1.500 CASH.

A VALUABLE PREMIUM FOR ALL.

This splendid illustrated weekly journal of popular science, mechanics, invention, engineering, chemistry, architecture, agriculture and the kindred arts, enters its twenty-fifth year on the first of January next, having a circulation far exceeding that of any similar journal now published.

The Editorial Department of the Scientific American is very ably conducted, and some of the most popular writers in this Country and Europe are contributors. Every number has 16 imperial pages, embellished with fine Engravings of Machinery, New Inventions, Tools for the Workshop, Farm and Household, Engineering Works, Dwelling Houses, Public Buildings.

A journal of so much intrinsic value, at the low price of $3 a year, ought to have, in this thriving country, A Million Readers.

Whoever reads the Scientific American is entertained and instructed, without being bothered with hard words or dry details

TO INVENTORS AND MECHANICS.

this journal is of special value, as it contains weekly report of all Patents issued at Washington, with copious notices of the leading American and European Inventions. The Publishers of the Scientific American are the most Extensive Patent Solicitors in the world, and have unequalled facilities for gathering a complete knowledge of the progress of Invention and Discovery throughout the world: and with a view to mark the quarter of a century, during which this journal has held the first place in scientific and Mechanical Literature, the Publishers will issue a January first the large and splendid Steel Engraving by John Sartain of Philadelphia, entitled:

the plate costing nearly $4.000 to engrave, and contains nineteen likenesses of Illustrious American Inventors. It is a superb work of art.

Single pictures, printed on heavy paper, will be sold at 50c., but any one subscribing for the Scientific American the paper will be sent for one year, together with a copy of the engraving, on receipt of $10. The picture is also offered as a premium for clubs of subscribers.

☞ $1,500 CASH PRIZES,☜

In addition to the above premium, the Publishers will pay $1,500 in Cash Prizes for lists of subscribers sent in by February 10, 1870. Persons who want to complete for these prizes, should send at once for prospectus and blanks for names

Terms of Scientific American, one year $2.00; six months $1.50; four months, $1.00. To Clubs of 10 and upwards, terms $2.50 per annum. Specimen copies sent free, address the Publishers,

TO THE WORKING CLASS.—We are now prepared to furnish all classes with constant employment at home, the whole of the time or for the spare moments. Business new, light and profitable. Persons of either sex easily earn from 50c. to $5 per evening, and a proportional sum by devoting their whole time to the business. Boys and girls earn nearly as much as men. That all who see this notice may send their address, and test the business, we make this unparalleled offer: To such as are not well satisfied, we will send $1 to pay for the trouble of writing. Full particulars, a valuable sample, which will do to commence work on and a copy of The People's Literary Companion—one of the largest and best family newspapers published—all sent free by mail. Reader, if you want permanent, profitable work, address E. C. ALLEN & CO., Augusta, Maine.
